

Gender Equality is a myth?

ONCE an army of ants decided to challenge the hegemony of elephants in the jungle. They chose an ant among them as their leader, and under his leadership they marched towards elephant. When they reached the place of Elephant, the leader ant gave an oration in which he motivated other ants by saying that they are equal to all other animals of jungle. He said that the elephant considered himself as the only supreme Power but we are thousands and we have equal rights as a gender just like the Elephant. They then they attacked on the Elephant; and elephant destroyed them all in a while. As the ants considered them as equal to the giant elephant but elephant destroyed them all and their

a single sentence conveys complete thought it is incomplete thought plz read it again and try to convey differently

by urging them

considered itself

it is good effort but please try to link properly notion of being equal to the giant elephant as gender vanished. This story explains how the notion of equality is not practically possible. while, in Pakistan gender equality is myth due to social ~~and economical~~ and ^{no} economic grievances which includes Poverty, unemployment, gender violence and unequal distribution of wealth.

~~Note: This is just the introduction of essay "Is gender equality a myth?"~~