INTRODUCTION

9/11 incident was the violent attack on United States of America by extremist and terrorist group Al-Qaeda operating in Afghanistan. A Pakistan, a foreign aid dependent country right after its independence, became the major USA's ally to counter these groups. Therefore, USA aided it economically and militarily in the post 9/11 incident. However, this USA's efforts against the terrorism and instable regional Afghanistan adversely impacted the political, economic, and social conditions of the country.

2) BACKGROUND

The violent attacks on the USA by extremist group Al-Qaeda were retaliated with the War on Terror. War on Terror was the USA and international effort to condemn extremism and terrorism. That is why the Pakistan-USA relations improved significantly after 9/11.

3) WHY PAKISTAN IS DEPENDENT ON FOREIGN AID; SPECIFICALLY AFTER 9/11

Pakistan sought and got loan internationally after 9/11 due to condemn the extremism and terrorism happening in its neighbouring. Besides, the military aid was given to it to develop military capacity against extremist Al-Qaeda. That is why it received 2500 mm USD aid from USA, right after 9/11.

5) CRITICAL AVALUATION

The war on terror, which was initiated to counter terrorism internationally, enhanced the terrorism in the region. The security conditions of Pakistan worsened and never became better after the 9/11. Besides it also disturbed the economic development of the country.

6) CONCLUSION

To conclude, the 9/11 attacks were met with the significant response by the international community. The USA aided economically and militarily to Pakistan to ensure the success of the War on Terror to eradicate the terrorism. However, not fulfilling its key objective, the war deteriorated the political environment, economic development and security conditions of the Pakistan.
