Essay

Pakistan is an under developing country which suffered from different challenges in its history. And it is still suffering with many of them. Corruption is also one of them. Pakistan started facing this challenge from the first day of its freedom. Corruption is like a slow poison, which is also causing a devastating impact on ~~it~~ other sector of Pakistan. Some of the devastating impact which it caused on other sectors are budget deficit, required loan by IMF/WB, good prices increases and corruption increase injustice in society. It also includes high floods, bring more unemployment, lack of a development in a country and bring moral decadence in a country. It also results in increase in energy prices, people stop trusting on government, increase in criminal activities, and middle class suffer to pay tax. Corruption can not be controlled by without strict rules and punishments. There is a dire need that government has to make and implement efficient and effective policies in this regard. Some of these policies include increase FBR revenue from tax and strict punishment for corrupt people such as punish them 10+ years in jail and fine them with huge amount. Without following these recommendations it is not possible to eradicate corruption from the society. However, the impact of corruption on Pakistan is very devastating. So, to cope up with these challenges government and organizations have to follow given steps. (233)
