"Peace is not the absence of conflict, but the presence of justice" (Martin Luther)

Law and order refers to the condition in which laws are respected, institutions of justice function effectively, and peace is maintained within a society through the prevention and control of crime, violence, and disorder. In the 21st century, however, maintaining this balance has become more challenging than ever before. In today's world, a single cyberattack can paralyze an entire nation, proving that law and order is no longer limited to streets but extends to cyberspace - From terrorism to cybercrime, the modern state is engaged in a constant struggle against forces that threaten social peace and stability. Rapid globalization, technological revolutions, urbanization, and political complexities have further magnified these challenges. Law and order, once a local concern, has now become a global issue in the modern era. Maintaining law and order in the modern era is becoming increasingly difficult due to rapid technological, social, economic, and political changes, making it one of the most pressing challenges for states worldwide.
