1. Introduction:

"There are a lot of children in our country that, because of their neighborhood or socio-economic status, do not have the opportunity to attend a good school that will prepare them for life's challenges." By Jared Polis.

Socio-economic challenges are problems or issues that disturb individual's life and slow down the economic growth of a country. These issues not only affect the economic growth, but also leads to multiple other factors which cause whole society to be disturbed. Bad governance, lack of transparency and efficiency can leads to socio-economic problems in the country. In addition, social inequality and injustice also disorganize the society and cause hinderence in economic growth. Moreover, low quality curriculum, untrained and give rise to such personalities which lack the capacity of development. In the same way, gender discrimination and urban-rural division in the country are the root causes of underdevelopment. Likewise, low budget allocation in education, health and agriculture sectors are root sources of socio-economic challenges. Besides, Unemployment and poverty in a society are the starting point of socio-economic issues.

Furthermore, lack of technology and health facilities are stimulus for the infant and maternal mortality which disrupt the whole society and weaken the country's economy. Hence, the country Pakistan is facing a bunch of socio-economic challenges.
