

If wants were horses even beggars would ride

The proverb "If wants were horses even beggars would ride" This means if you want to have something or you are wishing for something, you must need to work for it, to achieve ~~them~~ One's desires without effort one can not achieve ~~them~~ their desires. only wishing it is not enough, even beggars can wish a lot of things to have bank balance a luxurious life, but without efforts desires are of no value. If someone wants to ride a horse they must have it. Money resources are necessary for achieving dreams but some desires are unrealistic, e.g. wishing to change your past or have a good health when you are unhealthy. Some desires can not be fulfilled although you have money or resources. Therefore, all the needs and wants ~~can not be achieved~~ can not be achieved at once. Some desires that you achieve ~~can not be achieved~~ working alone their charm. The process of working for a desire gives you more satisfaction then only wishing.
