It is important to see our hidden flaws that how our enemies look at us. Usually, our friends praise us. <sup>First,</sup> they do not look at our fault as flaw, or they care us as much that they hide our flaws but do not want to hurt us. In contrast, our enemies expose us <sup>completely</sup>. They try to find our flaws from every corner. Although, they exaggerate something due to animosity, <sup>yet</sup> ~~but~~ <sup>it</sup> ~~it~~ has reality up to some extent. A friend always appreciates good deeds but an enemy <sup>exposes</sup> flaws. Our enemies look at our fault, so we <sup>should be</sup> more thankful to them. In this angle, ~~the~~ enemy is better than a friend.
