Balancing Nationalism with Humanity

According to Homi K. Bhabha, nations are created due to various factors.

They are welded by ethnic obsessions and regional associations. Resultantly, national identities often become exclusionary. Moreover, humanism is antagonized.

Numerous philosophers have talked about this issue.

They endorse balancing nationalism with equality for all citizens. Bhabha also encourages prioritizing shared humanity over narrow national interests.

Nationalism often leads to narrowed perspectives and xenophobia. However, it is not an outright disaster.

It has also led towards pluralism. Nevertheless the longing for dominance still remains, leading to violence.

Democracy also plays a role in disguising nationalism. It is exposed by Allama Iqbal in his poem, "The Devil's Parliament".

According to him, democracy
in reality is imperialist.
And imperialism indeed gives rise to nationalism. Nationalism can unify or divide
depending on how it is exercised. Nationalism needs
a different approach, one
that balances patriotism
and human rights.
