

Translator

QUESTION : 07 (2016)

People generally believe that the state's <sup>laws</sup> constitution <sup>and</sup> citizen's liberty are at odds with each other. Apparently this <sup>does not</sup> doesn't <sup>seem</sup> seem wrong. Every law puts some restrictions on the citizens. If the <sup>a</sup> country has too many laws then the cumulative restrictions also increase. ✓ The citizen's freedom gets crushed under the weight of excessive restrictions. On the contrary, the fewer the laws <sup>are</sup>, the wider the orbit of citizens' liberty. <sup>is</sup>

4/10