Lincoln Practicing ad hominem

An example of ad hominem in British Court of Law. Defense attorney got a note with ~~written~~ ^{written on it} "No case. Abuse the Plaintiff's attorney? If you cannot win the argument, discredit the opponent by ad hominem. Move from facing issue to ad hominem. A story of Lincoln, in his first case, he use ad hominem. His opponent was experienced and efficient. He was pessimistic that day. But when orator called him, he sat up with sparkling eyes. The opponent have buttoned up the shirt wrongly. Lincoln knowingly said at his turn, Gentlemen, Surely you will not be influenced by my opponent who do not ^{even} know, ~~there~~ that which side of shirt should be in front. And he won the case. This fallacy is commonly used, and it works. An example is president Eisenhower to served extra years, Franklin Roosevelt, they practiced ad hominem.
