The Greek philosophy was based on acquiring knowledge ^{illuminating} for human character and life. The philosophers were extrovert and professional in their ideas. At the beginning, Parmenides pondered on knowledge. Then, pre-Socratics started exploring about the secrets of Earth. Afterwards, Democritus criticized the medieval discourses on angels. Likewise, Thales were opponents to the idea that philosophers make fortune. Then after, Anaxagoras turned violent politicians into great thinkers and statesmen. Moreover, old Socrates went on corrupting youths and overturning governments despite Socrates' guidance. Last but not the least, Plato shattered the problems of perceptions, thoughts and knowledge. He envisioned the destiny of man by creating an ideal state. Lastly, the philosophy of Aristotle went all time high, solving every problem with wisdom.
