

Write precise of the given paragraph and suggest a suitable title.

In modern societies, the pace of innovation has outstripped the evolution of human judgment. The constant pressure to remain updated compels individuals to prioritize immediacy over interpretation, producing decisions that mirror trends rather than insight. This acceleration creates an illusion of competence: speed is mistaken for intellect, and familiarity with information replaces understanding. Consequently, institutions normalize perpetual urgency, eroding deliberative capacity and fostering a culture where reflection is dismissed as inefficiency. As a result, societies drift toward superficial consensus, mistaking rapid alignment for genuine collective wisdom

Title: Superficial choices, Title 2: Decline of Wisdom Title 3: Speed over Substance

Currently, individual's judgment has changed, therefore decision-making becomes a hasty process instead of reflective thinking-data is mistaken as knowledge. Organizations follow this trend, hence acceleration is mistaken as collective wisdom.
