

Precis - 1994

Title:

The Changing Future of Education

Education does not develop independently but reflects the nature of society. It is generally conservative, teaching the young what past generations have discovered. In the future, education will not be shaped mainly by teachers but also demographic shifts. Although the purpose of education, to prepare students for life and work, will remain unchanged, ~~(the)~~ It will undergo the fundamental transformation of teaching methods. Educational Institutions will continue to teach essential disciplines and provide skills to understand modern problems and technologies. However, educational systems will face pressure from large-scale immigration and political instability. As nations receive diverse populations, they must choose between assimilation and multicultural coexistence. Modern education systems reject the cultural coercion and raising questions about the future role and purpose of state-run education systems.

Date: _____