

Title

A Memorable Visit to Exotic Cherokee

Precis

The author was in search of some serene and exotic place to spend vacations. Upon John's suggestion, they took a flight to Cherokee, a town in Oklahoma. They visited Qualla village, by river side, giving calm and majestic scenery. The village was filled with local crafts and old lifestyle where nights were filled with events. The author and friend visited souvenir shops where they were warmly greeted by shopkeeper George. The shops displayed traditional and tribal crafts. George told them about difficult lives of Cherokee people during tourist off peak season. Villagers had to look for other means among which Bingo weekend helped them catch a big crowd. The author's final stop was museum filled with beautiful handcrafted items. Back in home, the author showed his excitement to visit another exotic place next vacations.
