

(Precis 1983)

(20)

Pathways To Rural Development

Rural development is considered as the most important and essential development. About 70 percent of the country population lives in rural areas. Half of them face immense poverty. If a rural development is ever taken into consideration, it would greatly improve country productivity. Until now, only agricultural sector is kept in view, which is not enough.

Development must be done in power sector i.e. providing sustainable electric power, good water supply, reforms in education sector and health sector. Such developments would brought immense change in rural areas and would lead to national productivity and prosperity of the country.

Passage words = 273
Precis words = 160

Sir, kindly check the
Second one as well.

Thanks

Precis (1993)

Immense Importance of Education

The writer said that providing intellectual assistance is of profound importance than material assistance. The major difference between knowledge and material gift is that, material gift is achieved without making any effort while intellectual gift is achieved by hardworking. In this way both values changes in accordance to its importance. Knowledge is a long-term achievement, it ultimately leads to development. While on the other hand, material assistance makes person dependent. Writer mentioned that with material assistance we might only help one person. But with intellectual assistance we would help the whole community. Because ~~ear~~ knowledge can be utilized for whole life.

Precis Count = 230

Passage Count = 110