Title: Freedom and Education

There are three <sup>schools</sup> of <sup>thought</sup> thoughts regarding freedom in children's education. Some believe in complete freedom irrespective of conduct. Others <sup>endorse</sup> ~~for~~ central authority regardless of children's <sup>behaviour</sup> behavior. The larger group thinks <sup>for</sup> moderate freedom for grooming. However, children will not be morally sound without command. Educators must encourage them to work for society apart from self-growth. Communities need corporation, and cannot rely on impulse. Therefore, educationist must support children's morality and inclusiveness and integration of communities which they cannot learn themselves. Socially, educationist must <sup>balance</sup> individual's need and societal advancement.
