

The golden Rule is ~~that~~ there is no golden Rule.

George Bernard Shaw once said that the golden rule is that there is no golden rule. This statement means that life is too complex for a single universal principle. ~~In simple way~~ its means solving all the problems with one universal rule which is not possible because a rule that has been proved beneficial for one might not work for another. There is always need of flexibility and adaptability. Human behavior and life style vary from one another, so flexibility is essential. In education system a teacher taught ~~same~~ thing to all ~~the students~~ but they succeed by following different strategies. A Rule that might be good for one not for another person. Another example is following golden Rule in relationships: Advice that work for one person may not work for another. In career or business deals one may succeed, through a single rule but another may need more efforts. Environment also matters, people are living in different places having different culture and language they cannot live the same way or follow the same rule every human being is different and they have different personalities some maybe introvert other extrovert they cannot be successful following same rule. people who rely on rules followed by others always face difficulties. one should think critically and solve their problems through proper Judgement. They should allow flexibility in their lives as every situation in life wants different rules and principles.

good in language and well connected
