Journalism Relevance in AI Boom

The writer has raised a serious question regarding relevancy of traditional journalism in presence of artificial intelligence (AI) boom. AI is able to perform journalism tasks efficiently which raises a question: Why would end users prefer traditional journalism in presence of AI? The recent trends show that youngsters are more inclined towards personalized and algorithmically curated journalism. However, writer explains the difference between journalism and mere transmittance of information by AI. No doubt, AI can easily recieve realistic data, interpret it and deliver it to the audiences. But it cannot ensure the authencity of delivered information. Here comes the role of a journalist. Major question is: are there journalists able to integrate AI in their workfield? Journalists need professional skills to understand these algorithmic systems to detect data biasness or discriminatory information that can harm the citizens. AI will never make journalism irrelevant, but the journalists who are not evolving are in danger.
