Title:

Climate and Its Influence on Human

In the Northern Europe, the cold is beneficial because it challenges people encouraging them to use their hidden energy to face such challenges. A struggle against difficulty is the only way to overcome it. Cold climates provide energy, hot climates offer motivation, and moderate climates inspire hope. In cold climate, for survival one has to build homes, wear thick clothes, collect material for fuel and eat healthy food to face cold and biting winds. While in tropics it is quite different. For sustainability of life they require little fruit or vegetable without putting much effort. The same applies to us; in hot weather we feel lazy, while in cold weather, we feel energetic.
