

EXAMPLE 15

199
Make a précis of the following passage in about one-third of the original and suggest a suitable title:-

Since human beings are fallible, the individual who cannot tolerate himself as fallible stands a slim chance of remaining on good terms with himself.

Before we plunge into action dictated by anguish or despair, we should ask ourselves: "Am I doing this because I honestly think it will help the situation, or am I, like a small child stung by a hornet running frantically in circles?" If we can train ourselves to face trouble and uncertainty, rather than fly from them, we will find that there are wise and steadying things we can do. To make even a small move towards a solution of our problem is good, for in facing up to one problem we gather strength to tackle the next. Great occasions do not make heroes or cowards. They simply unveil them to the eyes of men. Imperceptibly as we wake or sleep, we grow strong or weak, and at last some crisis shows what we have become.

Perhaps the greatest folly is for each of us to hug his troubles to himself. Often the path through our worst worries can be made smoother if we seek the guidance of a trusted friend. But there are limits to human wisdom. The only adequate way to endure large evils is to find large consolations. The key to this search is a prayer. And in asking God to strengthen us for meeting all the situations of life, we should behave as though we know God will answer.
