

He spent 27 years in prison

The significance of higher education in the advancement of a nation and transformation of a nation's fate is exemplified by a story of N. Mandela, who fought for and against apartheid. He got his higher education and completed BA from ~~by by~~ despite being in prison and, after completing higher education, he used a weapon of education to change the fate of his country in which he brilliantly succeeded by crushing apartheid and making South Africa a democratic nation. This makes it more than evident how higher education plays a pivotal role in development of a nation. But ~~So~~ unfortunately, Pakistan can't be using this weapon (~~weapon~~ education) to ameliorate its sinking ~~to system~~ economic position due to ~~culpits~~ such as ~~old~~ outdated curriculum, poor infrastructure, and ~~of~~ skyrocketing expenses of ~~a~~ higher acquiring higher education.

too it's out of the question for a country to prosper unless pertinent measures like introducing modern curriculum, ~~allocating~~ budget to improve infra, and ~~making~~ ^{higher} edu: affordable are taken both seriously and honestly.
