

Sample Passage:

1)When we survey our lives and efforts we soon observe that almost the whole of our actions and desires are bound up with the existence of other human beings. 2)We notice that whole nature resembles that of the social animals. 3)We eat food that others have produced, wear clothes that others have made, live in houses that others have built. 4)The greater part of our knowledge and beliefs has been passed on to us by other people through the medium of a language which others have created. 5)Without language and mental capacities, we would have been poor indeed comparable to higher animals.

6)We have, therefore, to admit that we owe our principal knowledge over the least to the fact of living in human society. 7)The individual if left alone from birth would remain primitive and beast like in his thoughts and feelings to a degree that we can hardly imagine. 8)The individual is what he is and has the significance that he has, not much in virtue of the individuality, but rather as a member of a great human community, which directs his material and spiritual existence from the cradle to grave.

PRECI WRITING

Title: Difference Between Human Beings and other Animals

Based on human lives analysis it's observed that, human beings are dependent on each other. The whole nature matches that of social animals. We use the one that is produced by another. It's the language that distinguishes human from other animals. We have to confess living in a human society gives us enlightenment. An individual when left alone from birth has no worth. Being in a human community give him a potential of wisdom and reason of existence.

