

Exciting and Exotic Trip to Cherokee

As John suggested the author a trip to Cherokee the author agreed and prepared for it. They took a flight and visited a paradical town Qualla Boundary. Showing tribal lifestyle of 18th century in Oconaluftee Indian village, Qualla Boundary presented Cherokee's image. With the help of natives they entered in a traditional handicraft shop and also saw tenets nearby. A middle-aged person George welcomed them in fluent english and they were chatting till lunch time. George told them it was better to work more hours during season in a shop than to be woodcutter. They learnt from George that there were many other means of income as well. Among them Bingo weekened is one of the great means for returns. The author returned home after visiting art museum of Qualla Boundary and looked forward to another exotic trip.
