

The narrator said that all evils in this world are brought by the peoples, but they do not know when these evil up and what are they doing. He imagined the devil, who is the busisiest creature in the world, who do not like laziness and also becoming angry on the waste of time. He believed that the world is in trouble /muddle but it is not due to the laziness. Also he possits that there is still plenty of energy in the world but most of it is misdirected. The writer emphasized the misdirection of devil in 1914 when the European countries were fought for achieving some capital and space. In this regard he said that if the European politicians relinquish / leave the idea of that laziness is crime, so they would be gain ~~at~~ more from it. Certain religious sects holds conferenes but they only condemning the length of the ladies and banning the bands. which make the fate of civilization in trouble.
