University Education: Its Aims and Objectives

A university should provide practical knowledge to the members of society. It is a vast world of knowledge that has no limits. A university cannot create genius people, rather it polishes the skills to make them genius, but it does not promise to give you the intellectual mind. A university can give pure and talented minds to the nation by polishing their natural skills. It gives a man confidence to develop his thoughts and the ability to express them. A university teaches the society and its members to achieve and maintain personal integrity and professionalism in their life.
