

EXERCISE 6

Almost every country in the world believes that it has some special dispensation from Providence, that it is of the chosen people, or race and that others, whether they are good or bad, are somewhat inferior creatures. It is extraordinary how this kind of feeling persists in all nations of the East as well as of the West without exception. The nations of the East are strangely entrenched in their own ideas and convictions and sometimes in their own sense of superiority about certain matters. Anyhow, in the course of the last two or three hundred years, they have received many knocks on the head and they have been humiliated, they have been debased and they have been exploited. And so, in spite of their feeling that they were superior in many ways, they were forced to admit that they could be knocked about and exploited. To some extent this brought a sense of realism to them. There was also an attempt to escape from reality by saying that it was sad that we were not so advanced in material or technical things but that these were after all superficial. Nevertheless we were superior in essential things, in spiritual things, in moral values. I have no doubt that spiritual things and moral values are ultimately more important than other things but the way one finds escape in the thought that one is spiritually superior simply because one is inferior in material and physical sense, is surprising. It does not follow by any means. It is an escape from facing up the causes of one's degradation.

Pride: Fall of Eastern Nations

Over pride always leads to humiliation

Most of countries in the world assume that they are superior than others. Exceptionally, this feeling exists in all nations of the World.

Eastern side have sense of elitism over certain matters. But, in the last few centuries they had a tough time marked by humiliation and exploitation. They were compelled to confront their vulnerability to exploitation. This humbling experience instilled in them a dose of realism. Attempting to escape reality by claiming being superior in spiritual matter as compensation for material and technical inferiority is not a good option. It is actually avoiding root causes of one's decline.
