

Precis 1976

Title: Present Industries: Their Needs and Issues

CUTTING LINE

Historically, the current industrial establishment is the outcome of government actions, innovations, labor competitions and union intervention. With productivity-~~enhancement~~ enhancing sales, the efforts of betterment must support evidence. Hurdles can be removed and speed maybe resisted. Harm identification was focused rather than leisure. But people prioritize hard work. Their ancient attitudes create doubt, in making effortless high production, which is mandatory for a strong economy. Making work pleasant, especially for a wage-earner is as important as a happy home. However, it is hard to differentiate between comfort and luxury. Mostly and normally, industries have more taxes for difficult tasks but it can be solved by hiring more less-skilled-manpower. Despite that, the hard work remains prioritized. As discussed, people are limited at working longer and having less. In a nutshell, still less time working is preferred over pleasant ones.

Word count: 131 + 5/395