Title: The Divine Will: Humans' desire.

The fear of mysterious life compelled the people to communicate with the divine who determined their fates. In ancient Greece, wishes of gods were decided by the art of giving oracles. These practices were practiced by the multiple soothsayers as per the gods signs or signals. Moreover, interpretation of dream and plumistry was also popular. However, at many occasions, the gods did not show their signs or signals rather they sent their prophets to deliver their messages to the people. Besides, practice of oracles was very common in the Greece to predict the future as well. Each oracle was located within a well-organized sanctuary and was directly linked to one or other of the gods.
