QNO1:- Instead of making machines our servants, the author says they have become our masters. In what sense has he come about?

The author says in the sense that machines were created to help people, but now we are completely rely on them. They need fuel, oil and maintenance, and if they stop working, our lives become difficult. People spend most of their time managing <sup>that</sup> making them more like masters than servants.

QNO2:- The use of machines has brought us more leisure and more energy. But the author says that this has been a curse rather than a blessing. Why?

The author says the use of machines has brought us more leisure and more energy that has been a curse rather than a blessing because machines save time and energy, but people do not use them wisely. They ~~are~~ keep making machines instead of improving life. This life does not lead to real progress. The free time could be used for creativity, learning, and helping others, but it is often wasted.

QNO3:- What exactly is the meaning of civilization? Do you agree with the author's views?

Civilization means creating beauty, thinking freely and ensuring justice. The author believes that true civilization is not just about machines but about improving human life. I agree because technology should be used for progress in arts, education, and fairness, not just making more machines.

QNO4:- Making more beautiful things - what does this expression mean? Make a list of the beautiful things that you would like to make and how you would make them.

Making more beautiful things means creating things that bring joy and pleasure and improve life. I would like to paint colorful pictures to make people happy, write inspiring books to spread knowledge, plant trees to make the earth greener and invent useful tools to help people in their daily lives.

Q. No. 5 :- Mention some plans you may have to prevent poverty in the world. Who would receive your most particular attention, and why?

Poverty can be reduced by giving free education, job training, and financial support to small businesses. My focus would be on children because they are the future. If they get education and skills, they can earn better in the future. Educated children can build better lives, break the cycle of poverty, and create a stronger society. If a society would be strong then a country would move toward progress and prosperity.
