Q1) How is knowledge different from understanding?

Ans : Knowledge is different from understanding in a way that former is formed due to incorporation of new and old experiences of life. While the latter is obtained by separating new experiences from the older one and reaching at the conclusion of present scenario.

Q2) Explain why understanding cannot be passed?

Ans : Understanding cannot be passed because unlike knowledge, it is non conceptual term that cannot pass through verbal communication or written. It is an immediate experience on which people can just talk but can never share because it is mainly a feeling that everyone has in its own way in given circumstances.

Q3) Is the knowledge of understanding possible? If it is, how may it be passed on?

Ans The knowledge of understanding is possible in a way that a person having past experiences of good or bad, on the basis of his experiences, he predicts the events of future or relates the present one with the past. In this way he can pass his understanding with speeches or writings.

Q4) How does the author explain that knowledge in his definition of know of understanding is not the same thing as the understanding?

Ans They are not the same things because understanding is driven by basic awareness of cause and effect relation. On the other hand, knowledge of understanding is accumulated by having past experiences with same situations.

Q5) How far do you agree with the author in his definition of knowledge and understanding? Give reasons for your answer

Ans The reason of giving consent on author definition is obvious because knowledge comes from old assumptions, analysis of events and universal accepted principles. While understanding differs from person to person, aligning with their experience of life.
