

Precis # 20/5

Title: Evil Nature of War

The writer believes that war is the cause of breakdown of civilisations. The war seems tolerable until its deadly effects are apparent. ~~The~~ Its benefits ~~are~~ outweigh its cost ~~during~~ the early stages of civilisation. It is during this stage that two states wage war and even defeated party bears not much loss. War appeared evil when states started to exercise their economic and political powers towards it. In addition to this man's success in industry and intelligence has ~~also~~ also been directed towards war efforts. It is at this stage that war reveals itself as cancer, which is fatal to its victim until he casts it out. In past serious efforts has been made to avoid war. Individual can act in two ways either be part of state's strategy to wage war or attempt to end the potential of war through persuasive techniques. Author believes, though unheroic, later works best.