

Vacations Trip to Cherokee

The narrator said that during his last May vacations, he was too confused in choosing a tour because he want to go some exciting and peaceful place. He was so happy when John called him and invited him to Oklahoma in the state of Cherokee.

The narrator agreed and took flight to Cherokee and visited to a paradise like town named Qualla boundary. The town presented a view of 18th century of Cherokee to tourists. Then narrator then visited to a shop of traditional antiques where he was welcome by an old man George and also he invited him to a coffee shop for lunch. On Friday afternoon, he went to gymnasium hall named Bingo hall which was the source of income for the town. Lastly, he visited to museum in town where the symbols of Cherokee were displayed. The narrator said that he really missing that place and looking forward for the next trip.