E) Conclusion.

After the treaty of Westphalia in 1648, the concept of modern nation state developed. Every nation state is sovereign in its affairs and in maintaining bilateral relations with other states. Moreover, judiciary protects the fundamental human rights and constitution. It holds accountable the executive in case of committing atrocities against its own citizens. Contrary to it, judiciary becomes more political and started interference in the affairs of parliament. No prime minister in the country has completed his tenure, all martial laws are validated by the Supreme Court. Moreover, Zulfikar Ali Bhutto was hanged in 1977 and in 2024 the apex court shown a verdict that, he was politically victimized. As a result, political interference starts to curtail the judicial activism, which caused to compromise the judicial independence. According to 8th amendment in the 1973 constitution of Pakistan the appointment of chief justice should be done from the sign of chief executive. Furthermore, judiciary cannot take actions against the members of treasury benches. Moreover, it cannot protect fundamental human rights and constitution, which are its fundamental functions. Judiciary is used for the political victimization and for the cases of treasury benches. Overall, the independence of judiciary is compromised.
