6- Conclusion

In 1945, during the Yalta conference, leaders like Churchill, Roosevelt, and Stalin made decisions that would divide the world into two rival blocs, marking the beginning of the cold war. This division shaped the world order for decades. However, after the 1991 collapse of the USSR, a unipolar world emerged, dominated by the United States. Today, the world order is shifting once more, compelling Pakistan to adapt its foreign policy to new global realities. The manifestation of changing world order may be observed as the economic and military rise of China and assertive foreign policy of Russia. Decline of the hegemony of United States. Growth of multilateralism through military alliances and strategic agreements and proxy conflicts reflecting a new power dynamic. However, changing world order has also waked Pakistan foreign policy by giving him choice of independent foreign policy, strengthening strategic alliances, shifting its foreign policy from geo-strategic to geo-economics. Furthermore, it helps in policy alignment with state's interests and international security policy. Therefore, it is need to take good options for benefits of Pakistan foreign policy.
