~~E. Conclusion~~

From Stone age to the present modern era of digitalisation, human society has been moved through many transformative phases. Thanks to Industrial revolution that drove the world from backwardness to the most advanced status of today. Japan is the most glaring example that comes to mind - through determination and steadfastness, she, while ignoring the ruins of history of 1945 came out of poverty and became the leading economic giant. Survey of poverty stricken community of Pakistan portrays the bleak picture of 33% living below the poverty line. This colossal percentage of people lack basic amenities like safe drinking water and basic health facility. If compared to other developing countries, the literacy rate is even more ~~lower~~ alarming. Rome was not built in a day, so the poverty. The sheer injustices of the early days after independence of Pakistan with one-third of population was probably poor; the initial problem. Since then, government had been taken steps to curb this menace. As the prevalent prevalent stigma of poverty is hanging on the ~~pe~~ 33% of people like a damocles sword, there is need of imparting education, adopting the austerity measures by the state, making people skillful through technical education, controlling the growing population on the footprints of China and modernizing the agri-sector to make it more productive are the ways out to choke the impending poverty.
