

Does poor economy of a country always affect education negatively?

1) Introduction

There is widespread debate on the effects of poor economy on the education of a country. The poor economy of a country has an inextricable impact on educational outcomes due to constraints on quality and accessibility of education. Thus, the economy of a country needs to be strengthened for positive educational outcomes.

2) How poor economy of a country affects education negatively

3) The inextricable link between a poor economy and negative education outcomes

- a) Education pushed to backseat for survival
- b) Lack of basic education infrastructure
- c) Inefficient and dissatisfied teachers
- d) Inflation and high fees
- e) Compromised health and energy sector
- f) Technological backwardness leading to decrease in access to modern education
- g) Privatization and planization

4) Sufficient Potential of Education resilience in poor economies

- a) Growth of private education system

DATE: ___/___/20___

b) Shift to remote learning to avoid cost of infrastructure

c) Support from government and NGOs

① d) Investment in Vocational training and education

② e) Foreign Funding as a breather

5) Grave loopholes in realizing the potential of education in poor economy

a) Private education is too expensive for majority

b) Technological access hinders remote learning

c) Government and NGO support is not enough in poor economic situation

d) Vocational training produces workers and not educated officers

e) Corruption and inefficiency hampers good use of foreign funding

6) Conclusion