After Industrialization

↳ After industrialisation, when industries were created, women were oppressed by men. The owners and workers both's food and washing clothes were all work was done by women without giving her wages. Therefore both patriarchy and capitalism were dominating women. And it oppressed and subjugated to women.

Conclusion: Both of the types of feminism that is Radical and social feminism are oppressing women in the society. Radical feminism is patriarchy that is oppressing in social and economic domains of a woman. While, social feminism is in addition to patriarchy oppressing women by creating a kind of capitalism. Therefore, to promote Gender equality both of these types of feminism must be devised.
