It was a sunny day in Khan Youns, Gaza. Omina was playing with her son in the garden of olives. Suddenly, Israeli Airforce targeted the town. Omina lost hold on her son. The most notorious loud of explosion near the garden resulted in massive smoke. When she recovered from the chaotic situation, it was a horrible sight now front of her. Omina saw her son lying near the broken tree of olives wet with blood. Omina lost her son in the raids of Israel. Days passed but the ground invasion on Gaza pushed her to leave the city. Omina experienced sexual violence, hunger, health issues and oppression. It was the mid of 2024 when Israeli Airforce struck tents near Al-Shufa Hospital. The raids burnt the tents where Omina was sleeping with her family. The Palestinian Health Ministry confirmed the next day that Omina was burnt alive with her family. Undoubtedly, ethical dilemmas in the modern conflict became common. Every day thousands of men, children and women like Omina die from the aggression of wars. The philosophy of just war in the 21st century is confined to conferences and meetings of leaders. The sight of ethical dilemmas in modern conflicts became common. Civilians are experiencing massive casualties, starvation, violence and war crimes. Besides, destruction of healthcare and warheads used against civilians are common in the 21st century wars. These all dilemmas in the modern conflicts can be eliminated through the United Nations Security Council and involvement of international community.

Also, respecting universal declaration of human rights, imposing sanctions and regulating AI can eliminate the ethical dilemmas in modern conflicts.

Thus, the philosophy of just war can be achieved in the current world order.
