Corruption: a threat to Liberalism

Corruption is leading to far right politics, a threat to liberalism in the world. Far right politics is a concept which is based on the conservative and nation extremist ideology. Political parties, due to their corrupt practices, are losing their influence in their countries, leading to the popularity of far right politics in the world. It is a serious threat to the liberalism which advocates for democratic values. Far right politics promotes racism and pro nationalism. It is against the immigration and aims to have homogeneity of culture. For example, FPÖ (Freedom Party of Austria), <sup>had</sup> served under the supervision of German leader Hitler, has now won election in Austria, because other common parties have lost their public trust due to involvement in corruption. Now, FPÖ is going to create its government. It has a vision of establishing dictatorship and authoritarian type of government. This party is supposed to have roots in Nazi party which caused destruction in America during 1930-1940. This party had a good relationship with Russia which wants to increase its influence over European countries. This pro-Russian party could be prove a threat for Europe. Hence, corruption is paving way for dictatorship by undermining democratic values.
