Every era brings with it such circumstances that nobody likes but they have to be accepted. Sometimes it also happens that nature perhaps tests us and put things in ~~a~~ front of us that we don't like; in fact, we have nothing to do with them, but still, we have to move forward by making them a part of our life. This is also happening today. Every century had brought with it changes which were quite new as compared to the previous ~~gener~~ centuries. The advancement of natural sciences and arts has given so much to human that can be termed as a garbage for academic and economic function. Nature gives us fruits, but at the same time makes it obligatory upon us to properly manage its garbage. If it is not done, then environmental pollution increases.

Greeks and Their Belief Systems

While dealing with the challenges of life, humans have always craved for a divine connection to understand His wishes. This was also practiced in ancient Greece through the art of oracles by which the soothsayers, claiming to understand the signs of God, used to guide people about their fate. They mostly do ~~so~~ so through interpretation of lightening, thunder, and fire, etc. Greeks also had prophets or prophetess who, for a very period, entered in an ecstatic state to deliver direct messages of God. All these practices were the basis of Greeks' belief system. They had different Gods responsible for the interpretation of different oracles, and were all operating under one main God, the Zeus.
