

A Memorable Trip to Cherokee, Oklahoma

I, along with friend John, visited Cherokee, a country in the state of Oklahoma, during vacations last May. We visited a town called Qualla Boundary, surrounded by a breathtaking mountains view. The traditional lifestyles of the Indians, tribal crafts they made, and the historical pageant (played six times a week) all together represented the image of Cherokee in the 18th century. We also visited souvenir shops which sold rubber tomahawks and war bonnets. We also befriended a local, George, who told us that besides trade, "Bingo Weekends", ~~which offered various kinds of games~~ a houseful attraction place where various kinds of games were offered, was another source of income for locals during tour off-peak periods. Finally, we visited a museum where different types of arts were displayed.
