A visit to Qualla Boundary in Cherokee

According to the author, it was difficult to select a tour destination during his vacation. On John's suggestion, he finalized Cherokee. After reaching there, they went to Qualla Boundary which was presenting breathtaking scenery. The place pictured the past of Cherokee before tourists by showing various artworks and lifestyle of 18th century. Then they visited souvenir shop which had ancient things inside. They communicated with George there. He told them that beside trade, Cherokees utilize other means of income as well. "Bingo Weekend" is one of them, a kind of game activity resulting in huge income for them. Their last visit in Qualla Boundary was to the museum, where different artworks were symbolizing the traditions of Cherokee.
