Philosophers believed art has been accused of exciting our emotion. Plato believed art waters our experience. Tolstoy viewed it as "source of infection". He suppresses a fundamental moment of art "The aesthetic experience". It is filled with the liveliest energy of passion. Wordsworth view poetry as "emotion recollected in calm". The emotions of poet do not belong to the past. They are alive. Shakespeare, never give us an aesthetic theory. His character "Hamlet" explain the objective of art as to show the image of reality. But the image of reality is not the reality itself. The art viewers are not affected by the passion of characters. He They see through them and understand their nature. All artists agree with Shakespeare that art does not corrupt their emotions, but helps them to understand those.
