Introduction paragraph

A child's lifeless body in Gaza, a siren wailing in Tel-Aviv, a viral tweet - each becomes a global flashpoint. But who decides what the world sees? The media does. In just one week of intense fighting, millions around the world form opinions about the Israel-Palestine conflict - often based not on facts, but on headlines, hashtags and 30 second video clips. Media in form of newspapers, social media and live stream play an important role in Israel-Palestine war. Majority are standing in favour of Palestine and against genocide, but some only presenting one side of Israel. For them casualties in Palestine is only a number. Many Journalists are not allowed to have access to Palestine. Because Israel don't want to expose his genocide. Media also changes public perception. But overall media fails to address this conflict, whether due to unprofessionalism or one sided coverage.
