

GDP of a country is an indicator of its economy. GDP is not only an economical term, but it tells the story of a population. It is indeed a reflection of society.

Countries with high GDP value differ from countries of low GDP not in the economic standing, but also in their life styles and mindset.

We always criticise Pakistan's government for not making us knowledge economy and not having research institutes, but the issue is not only about the bad governance but an effect of low GDP of Pakistan as well. People in high GDP value countries can afford necessities easily and the money they do not require goes to charity and as funds to research institutes.

Muhammad Bin Qasim was only 17 when he conquered Sindh and made Sindh Dar-ul-Islam (Babul Islam). Qasim was sent by Hajaj Bin Yusuf to teach a lesson to Hajaj Bin Raja Dahir.

Muhammad Bin Qasim was wise and kind leader. During his reign he played a major role in the propagation of Islam. A huge number of noble people and civilians converted to Islam. Hindus and other religions' followers were given the rights of Dirhamin which means protected class.

In 712 he conquered Sindh and had annexed to Multan till 714. Hajaj Bin Yusuf's death led to appointment of his son Suleman as new governor of Iran. Suleman had disliking for Muhammad Bin Qasim, whom he imprisoned under false accusations. Some historians believe Qasim died in 715 in the prison at the mere age of 20 years.

Poverty

Poverty—a cliché word, a topic every News platform and talk show loves to discuss, still choose not to do a thing about it.

Poverty is not only Pakistan's issue but a global issue which has been existed in the world since ages. Article and stats will keep documented, while people continue to die. Even right now, in this moment many people are on death bed due to lack of adequate healthcare facilities, a balanced diet and hygiene related products. Malnourishment is a major contributor of high neonatal death ratio across developing countries. Poverty is shifting Youth's mindset. Youth consider education as wastage of time and there only goal is getting rich. Diving deeper, we can conclude that major factors contributing to poverty in Pakistan are population growth, inflation, lack of education and political instability.
