Essay

Poverty is like a slow poison, which not only slows down the activities of other sectors, but also gradually increases the criminal activities in a society and destory the country in a long time. In today's many countries in the world are facing this problem, but due to lack of resources they are unable to tackle this problem and to eradicate it. On the other hand, many powerful and economically strong countries are investing there money to explore space, rather than giving this money to poor countries, to eliminate poverty from the world. Poverty causes severe negative impacts on society or nation such as it increases criminal activities, increases dependency on loans, increases budget deficit, leads to the corruption, moral decadence, decreases unity, starvation, negatively impacts on mental health and makes society weak. Whether economically or defensively. However, poverty is one of the biggest problem in the world, yet it is still not properly eradicated from the world due to lack of proper, efficient and effective strategies and policies. (170)
