Challenges of Political Poetry

The theme of the poetry tells about the situation in which people do not learn from personal experiences rather focus on rumors, contradicting the poetry that emphasizing on person's unique and individual experiences. The poet covers and understands the public issues which depends on the information from surroundings and media. His motivation to write about public affairs and personal matters is different from each other, rather shares his opinion which seeks people may experience. The political poet understands from past but understands and explains the realities of present. The gap between poet and his subject can never be fully bridged because his efforts to connect with the events are limited. In poetry selection, it is important to be clear on true sense, keeping in view his subject and the issues which is unimportant for others. Political poetry swings between these extremes, and its modern history shows efforts to manage both of them.
