

5
ion
Title : Greek ways to communicate with Gods.

In order to understand the life and nature, man wished to connect himself to God. So, he started noticing different signs of God as his way of communicating with humans. The interpreters used to read the signs of nature. They interpreted these signs as the willingness or hatred of God. Moreover, in some old Greek times, some interpreters also used to analyze the dreams and read hands for fortune telling. However, in many a times, God didn't communicate through these methods but by the communicators sent by him. God sent his messages to the humans through these communicators. Every fortune teller was associated with different God in Greek era.

main idea is picked precis is less than required words

precis is incomplete

basic grammar weak

incorrect interpretation of the passage

need improvement

5/20

Words in Passage : Approx 338

Words in Precis : 109 words

The fear of human beings when faced with the mysteries of life and their weakness by comparison with the vastness of nature created in them a need to communicate with the divine, with the superior powers which they believed regulated the universe and determined their own fates. Knowledge of wishes of the gods was always a sure guide for human behavior. In ancient Greece, the precise nature of these wishes was 'decoded' by the art of giving oracles, practiced by soothsayers who had the gift of understanding the signs or signals sent by the gods.

The soothsayers uttered their oracles by interpreting flashes of lightning, rolls of thunder or the flights of certain birds of prey (omens); alternatively, they might observe the direction in which the fire burned when a sacrifice was made, examine the entrails of animals which had just been sacrificed, or base judgments on the sacrificial beast's willingness to approach the altar. The interpretation of dreams was popular too, and so was palmistry. The most notable soothsayers of ancient Greece were Tiresias, Calchas, Helenus, Amphiaraus and Cassandra.

However, there were abundant instances in which the gods did not manifest themselves to the faithful in the forms of signs but spoke directly to an intermediate who for a short time was overcome by a 'divine mania' and transcended his own human essence. Here the prophet- or more usually the prophetess- entered a state of ecstasy in which he or she delivered the message from the gods to the suppliants.

These practices for foreseeing the future were the basis on which the ancient Greek oracles operated. Each oracle was located within a properly-organized sanctuary and was directly associated with one or other of the gods. Apollo was the archetypal soothsayer for the Greeks the god who was responsible for conveying to mortals the decisions pronounced by Zeus. The most important of all the oracles, that at the Delphi, delivered the messages with the intervention of Apollo, while the oldest that of Dodona, functioned with the assistance of Zeus.