

Title: "Middleclass and nineteenth century"

Besant wrote about middle class of nineteenth century. They <sup>were</sup> excluded from Society, ~~not~~ even they were not invited to Country families, homes and clubs. Social inclusion depended upon status of families, however, people who belonged to Army and Navy were respected despite their family backgrounds. Middle class knew their place therefore, they created their own Society.

In <sup>it,</sup> ~~which~~ they <sup>underwent</sup> ~~undergone~~ certain change, such as population growth as well their influence increased.

They not only got respect there but also settled certain guiding principles. Those conventions became guidance for lower orders. Furthermore, they also did not allow ill-mannered or ill-ordered lifestyle in their Society. They <sup>were</sup> also concerned about the poor as well as their settled values, which were hardwork, piety and thrift.

Precis Year 2000:

original precis: 340

Idea is ok. Precis looks a bit long.

Revised: 114.

Precis: 115.