

Topic : The importance of equality and social justice

Quaid-e-Azam Muhammad Ali Jinnah said, in his speech, "There is no difference between Punjabi, Sindhi, Balochi and Pashto. We all are the citizens of Pakistan". In his another speech he also emphasizes the importance of equality and social justice by saying that, minorites and every person has freedom to perform his rituals and there is no restriction on their religion. By analyzing, all of his speech, we come to the point that in national integration and unity equality and social justice plays a significant role. When there is equal justice for everyone whether they are rich or poor, punjabi or sindhi and christian or muslims, minorities feel safe and comfortable in the country. Minorities feel confident in their country and feel safe when they know that they have equal rights and opportunities and also have freedom of speech. Social justice and equality not only gives rights to the minorities but also to the women. When, the country brings social justice and equality to women, they feel confident to become an independent women, to pursue their careers and to work for the betterment of their country. Social justice and strict rules reduces the corruption, which is one of the biggest problem in the betterment of our country. When there is no corruption and injustice, it reduces the poverty. Poverty is the main reason of crime, robbery and some time it leads to the death of innocent people. But when country follows equality and social justice it eradicates the poverty. Social justice and equality develops the sense of unity, integration and brotherhood in the country and which also develops the patriotism. The country whose people are united, integrated and patriotic that country easily enhance its over all economy and become a strongest country all over the world. Equal rights and social justice and enhancing economy condition, enhance the reputation of a country all over the world. Tourist finds that country as a safe place to visit, which increases the economy condition of a country. In conclusion, to develop a paternalism in people, to women empowerment, protect minorities rights and enhance the country reputation, there is a dire need to bring a social justice and equality in the country. (363)
